Instructions:

Today, we've been learning all about Isaiah. Do you remember what happened in the story? (Isaiah met God and God sent him forward as a representative.) That's right. Do you remember who Isaiah sees first? (Angels) Isaiah sees angels surrounding God. What do you think angels look like? Allow kids to respond. Those could all be right. Today, we're going to make angels out of coffee filters that will remind us of Isaiah's story.

1. Have each kid place two cotton balls in the middle of a coffee filter, then take another coffee filter and place it on top, so the cotton balls are sandwiched between the two filters.
2. Show kids how to pull both filters around one end of the cotton balls so that the cotton is on one end and a coffee filter skirt is on the other (it should look similar to a badminton birdie), then invite them to tie a piece of ribbon below the cotton balls to keep them secure.
3. Have kids take a third coffee filter and fold it in half. Then fold it in half again lengthwise so it looks like a quarter of a circle. Then take a white pipe cleaner and wrap it around the middle, fanning the coffee filter out to look like wings.
4. To make a halo, show kids how to take a gold pipe cleaner and make a circular shape at the end about the size of a quarter with a three-inch stem.
5. Have an adult helper use a hot glue gun to attach the halo to the back of the angel, then glue the wings on to the back of the angel as well, covering the halo's stem.

You all made some pretty cool angels! You can take your angels home and hang them up by a window or put them some place special. Every time you see your angel, remember how God called Isaiah and how Isaiah said, "Send me!"

If you have less time...

Make halos for kids ahead of time.

If you have more time...

Invite kids to add faces to their angels by applying acrylic paint with toothpicks. Invite kids to be creative as they give their angels fun faces and expressions.
